

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

Some time must pass before the completion of an adequate description and analysis of the Chamberlain Collection of Autographs. Meanwhile it is desirable that somewhat be known of its size and scope, particularly for the information of libraries and students at a distance. A portion, however, is already exposed to public view in a series of framed documents and tablets. Placed as these tablets are, in a position to attract the notice of younger students of American history, they are now rendered most intelligible and useful by historical prefaces which introduce their titles throughout the following pages. In a few months it is proposed to print in separate form the full text of the four great documents, mentioned more fully beyond, and with them to reprint the prefaces to them, as well as the descriptions of the tablets.

The account which here follows of the general collection coincides in part with an article written a few years ago for the Boston Sunday Herald, by the Rev. Julius H. Ward, from memoranda furnished by the Hon. Melan Chamberlain.

In the preparation of this pamphlet, especially of the part relating to the framed documents and tablets, the Library has secured the assistance of Edwin M. Bacon, Esq., who has gained an intimate knowledge of the Collection by his classification of the material therein.

THE GENERAL COLLECTION.

The general collection occupies a room opening from the Librarian's room and especially fitted to receive it. When bound and catalogued, the collection will be more fully open to examination than is now practicable. It consists of bound and unbound volumes of manuscripts, and of printed books, expanded and extra-illustrated; in all, more than three hundred and fifty volumes, conveniently to be divided for the purpose of description, into American and European sections, and unclassified material.

THE AMERICAN SECTION.

In the American section, relating to the colonial, provincial, and revolutionary periods, are twelve volumes of Massachusetts historical manuscripts; three devoted to New Hampshire, from the first settlement; fifteen to famous men, from all the colonies, connected with the Revolution; three to the signers of the Declaration of Independence; and five to Washingtoniana. One volume is given to the prominent Quakers who suffered persecution in Boston, in 1660; one to Burgoyne's campaign, in 1777; and one to the actors in the Salem witchcraft tragedy. Five royal-octavo volumes, richly bound, contain letters, documents, manuscripts, and portraits, relating to Benjamin Franklin, to John Adams, to John Hancock, to Samuel Adams and Joseph Warren, and to those engaged, on both sides, in the battles of Lexington, Concord, and Bunker Hill.

Among the volumes relating to this early period, some merit particular description. The volume given up to the Quakers persecuted in Boston contains the unpublished letter which William Dyer, the husband of the unfortunate Mary Dyer, wrote to the Court of Assistants in 1659, pleading for the life of his wife; also the original "Warning" of Margaret Smith — the original of Whittier's "Margaret Smith's Journal" — "given forth in the House of Correction in Boston, New England, December 1660," and other papers respecting the treatment of the Quakers by the Massachusetts authorities.

The five volumes relating to Washington may properly be classed with the series of the Revolution, although they include letters and documents written by Washington between the age of eighteen and the closing years of his life, with letters and portraits of his contemporaries associated with him both in military and civil affairs. Among these contemporaries represented are Braddock, Lord Loudon, Baron Steuben, the titular Lord Stirling, Israel and Rufus Putnam, Knox, Gates, Charles Lee, Henry Lee, Greene, Sullivan, Arnold, Lord and Sir William Howe, Sir Henry Clinton, Cornwallis, Lafayette, Rochambeau, de Grasse, Duportail, Earl Buchan, Luzerne, Genet, Jefferson, Hamilton, Randolph, Wolcott and Habersham. One volume is made up of the various portraits, prints of busts and monuments of Washington, with portraits and autographs of the distinguished artists to whom he sat. It contains every known portrait of Washington which has any merit as a likeness or as a work of art.

The volume of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence contains a very curious series of about twenty autograph poems, which George Wythe of Virginia and William Ellery of Rhode Island addressed to each other, and probably composed while the question of independence was under discussion in the Congress of 1776.

Memorials of various sorts are collected in the volumes relating to the unfortunate expedition against Canada in 1690, which was paid for by the first issue of paper money instead of by expected booty; to the capture of Louisburg in 1745, which was followed by the expatriation of the Acadians; and to the proposed attack on Crown Point in 1755. In one or the other of these expeditions Governor Shirley, the Pepperrells, Commodore Warren, and Colonel John Winslow were prominent. The period of the Stamp Act

The Lexington and Concord fights, and the battle of Bunker Hill, are fully illustrated by original contemporary letters and documents interleaved in the monographs printed in 1875, commemorating the centennials of those events. These manuscripts include the name of nearly every man of distinction found on either side of the contest, among them General Gage, Lieut.-Colonel Smith, who led the main party of the British, Lord Percy, who brought up the relieving columns, Paul Revere and William Dawes, who carried the alarm to Middlesex, James Barrett and Major Buttrick, who were conspicuous on the American side, Gerry, Orne and Lee, of the Committee of Safety and Supplies, who escaped capture by the British only by a precipitate flight from their beds at the Black Horse Tavern in Menotomy (Arlington), Joseph Warren, and the Rev. Jonas Clarke, in whose house John Hancock and Samuel Adams had been entertained the night before the fight. One of the most interesting documents here is the original bill of Dr. Joseph Fisk for medical services rendered to the "King's Troops on the 19th of April."

The monograph of Bunker-Hill, June 17, 1775, bound with that of Lexington and Concord, is even more fully illustrated, and contains several letters and documents written on the day of the battle and relating to it. One is a letter of Israel Putnam to the Committee of Supplies relative to forwarding eighteen barrels of powder from Connecticut. Here also is found the letter of Daniel Webster correcting the proof sheets of his oration at the laying of the cornerstone of Bunker-Hill monument, and the original invitation to deliver the oration on the completion of the monument. On blank pages of the volume Whittier has transcribed his "Lexington, 1775," Emerson, his famous Concord Bridge hymn, and Holmes, his "Grandmother's Story of Bunker Hill Battle."

Following the Revolution, there are memorials of the Constitutional Convention of 1787, and of the successive administrations from Washington to Grant. In these are grouped the presidents, cabinets, diplomats, judges, speakers of the House, and the leading statesmen in both houses of Congress.

American artists occupy six volumes; American inventors, one volume; men of affairs, twenty-three volumes; Massachusetts judges and lawyers, eight volumes; miscellanies, twenty-three volumes; historic houses of the United States, illustrated with autographs, views and portraits, two volumes. Duyckinck's "Cyclopædia of American Literature" is expanded into forty-seven volumes by portraits, autograph letters and original manuscripts of poems or other writings of the greater part of the authors treated in that work, and of many others incidentally mentioned in its biographical notices. This work is supplemented by twenty-three volumes of literary characters not included in Duyckinck. In the volumes devoted to American artists is found every memorable name from Copley to recent times.

THE EUROPEAN SECTION.

The European section includes four volumes devoted to sovereigns, thirty to men of affairs, eleven to men of letters, one to musicians, two to actors and actresses, six to artists, two to philosophers, four to scientific men, ten to the period of the Revolution in France, and six to Shakespeare.

All the sovereigns of England from Henry VII. to Victoria, except Edward VI., are included; of France from Louis XII. to Louis XVI.; representatives of the French Directory, the Consulate, the First empire, and of the Bonaparte family; and such rulers of other nations (to mention only some of the most famous) as Ferdinand and Isabella, the Philips of Spain, Gustavus Adolphus, Charles XII., Frederick the Great, Maria Theresa, Catherine II. and Alexander I. of Russia. Among the volumes given to men of affairs, letters or documents are found of the earls of Essex, of Leicester, Fairfax, Sully, Mazarin, Colbert, Richelieu, Coke, Cecil, Fox, George Grenville, Lord North, the younger Pitt, Grattan and his eminent contemporaries, and of such Among musicians, composers and performers, are the names, some of them accompanied by manuscripts of compositions and all with portraits, of Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Auber, Schneider, Weber, Sontag, Meyerbeer, Schumann, Wagner, Sir Henry R. Bishop, Jennie Lind, and Ole Bull; among actors, of Garrick, the Kembles, Talma, Mrs. Siddons, Mrs. Inchbald, Macready, Buckstone, John Maddison Morton (the farce writer), Junius Brutus Booth, Forrest, Charles Kean, Vandenhoff, Edwin Booth, and John Brougham.

The volumes of Shakesperiana include autograph letters of nearly all the Shakesperian editors and scholars — Edmund Malone, Mrs. Montagu, Bishop Percy, Thomas Tyrwhitt, Richard Farmer, Dr. Nathan Drake, Charles Knight, Sir Harris Nicholas, George Steevens, Isaac Reed, Anna Seward, the Rev. Thomas Bowdler, Alexander Chalmers, Francis Douce, Ireland the forger, Alexander Dyce, James O.

PRINTED BOOKS.

Though the Chamberlain Collection consists mainly of autograph letters and documents, it includes also several volumes bearing the autographs of famous men; and others, besides many pamphlets, which are the inscribed gifts of authors. Among the former is a copy of Scaliger's Poetics, with two autographs of Pope; another entitled "Desiderii Erasmi Flores," date of 1645, with Mather Byles's autograph on the title page; another made up of Thomas Moore's autograph notes for a History of Ireland; another, and perhaps the most interesting of them, is the little duodecimo volume in which Coleridge, Charles Lamb, and Lloyd, made their venture in publishing their poems, in 1797. This was Lamb's own copy in which he transcribed at the end of his printed poems his sonnet to "Miss Kelly," signed "C. Lamb, Sept. 1819." He at first inadvertently wrote this sonnet on the blank half page separating the poems of Lloyd from his own. Discovering his mistake, he cut out the leaf, and in doing so also excised two stanzas of Lloyd's poems printed on the reverse of the leaf. To restore these stanzas — Miles Standish and John Alden. Besides these autographs the volume contains letters of Governor Winslow, Cotton Mather and others, and many engraved illustrations of scenes and events referred to in the poem.

Another book, enlarged in a similar way, is the "Salem Witchcraft," by Charles W. Upham, in two volumes. It contains many of the original complaints, depositions, executions, and other papers used at the trials of those charged with witchcraft, together with documents or letters of many persons who, like Cotton Mather, were conspicuous in that delusion.

SKETCH OF MELLEN CHAMBERLAIN.

It is fitting that a few facts of the life of Judge Chamberlain, and of the conditions under which the collection was made, should be recorded here. Mellen Chamberlain was born, June 4, 1821, at Pembroke, N. H. In 1844 he graduated, with high rank, from Dartmouth College. After teaching for several years in Brattleboro, Vt., in 1846 he entered the Harvard Law school, and soon after was appointed Librarian of that department of the university. In 1849 he was admitted to the bar, and in June of the same year became a citizen of Chelsea, where he still resides. He was a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1858-59; of the Senate, the present interest, and the competition resulting, had not yet developed. As a consequence, not only signatures and letters, but historical documents of considerable importance, were often to be had for the asking. Even in public offices a disregard of historical papers led to their disposal in ways which put them easily into the hands of collectors. Judge Chamberlain and the late Dr. George H. Moore, of the Lenox Library, both benefited, even as early as when at school together in Concord, N. H., by this disregard and prevailing indifference.

Later, association with Dr. John Farmer, the genealogist, at that time employed by the state of New Hampshire to arrange its archives, widened and strengthened Judge Chamberlain's interest. It was his good fortune, also, to have for correspondents several famous collectors, among others the Rev. Dr. Sprague, of Albany, I. K. Tefft, Esq., of Savannah, and Robert Gilmor, Esq., of Baltimore.

Judge Chamberlain has always been a man of affairs. Notwithstanding, however, his devotion to the main business of his life, he has maintained his interest in this collection of autographs and historical manuscripts, until to-day the Chamberlain collection, while it is strong in general interest, is unrivalled in the scope and variety of its material relating to New England.

DOCUMENT A.

Address to the King by the Congress of 1774.

On December 16, 1773, the inhabitants of Boston assembled at the Old South Church to act about several cargoes of teas shipped to that port by the East India Company of English merchants, which the Boston people determined should not be landed. Finding that the teas would not be sent back to England, the meeting dissolved and fifty men disguised as Indians went to the wharf where the tea ships lay and threw the teas overboard. When the news of these proceedings reached England, Parliament, to punish the people of Boston for these riotous acts, on March 28, 1774, passed the "Boston Bill," which closed the town as a port of entry and caused great distress to the inhabitants. About the same time Parliament passed a bill radically changing the charter of Massachusetts. These measures affected all the colonies and aroused their resentment. To express this popular feeling and to pass retaliatory measures, a General Congress of the colonies assembled at Philadelphia, September 5, 1774, and continued in session nearly eight weeks, during which it formed a "Plan of Association" against importation or consumption of English goods, and against exportation of Colonial products to England. It also prepared addresses to the people of Great Britain, to those of the British colonies, and to the inhabitants of Quebec; passed a Declaration of Colonial rights; and, on October 26, 1774, AN ADDRESS TO THE KING. Of these papers, Lord Chatham, on moving an address to the King, January 20, 1775, to recall the troops from Boston, said: "When your lordships look at the papers transmitted us from America; when you consider their decency, firmness, and wisdom, you cannot but respect their cause, and wish to make it your own. For myself, I must declare and avow, that in all my reading and observation — and it has been my favourite study — I have read through Thucydides, and have studied and admired the master-states of the world — that for solidity of reasoning, force of sagacity, and wisdom of conclusion, under such a complication of difficult cir-

DOCUMENT B.

The Declaration of Independence as signed by the Continental Congress at Philadelphia, August 2, 1776.

When Richard Henry Lee's resolution, "That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be dissolved," was agreed to by the Congress on July 2, 1776, the battle had been fought and won. This was the day of which John Adams, writing to his wife, July 3, said, "Yesterday the greatest question was decided, which was ever debated in America, and a greater, perhaps, never was nor will be decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, 'that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States,' etc. . . . The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. . . . It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance." But July 4, when the Declaration drafted by Jefferson was made, is regarded as the more memorable day, partly, it may have been, because of the belief long prevalent that on that day the Declaration was signed by the members of Congress. But it was otherwise; for on July 4 it was signed only by John Hancock, President, and mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

* * * * *

We therefore the representatives of the United States of America in General Congress assembled, appealing to the supreme judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do in the name, and by the authority of the good people of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these united Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as free and independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent States may of right do.

And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

DOCUMENT C.

The subject of some sort of a general government for the Colonies engaged the attention of Congress even before it had declared them independent States. It was embraced in Richard Henry Lee's resolutions of June 7, 1776; and on July 11 Congress voted to choose a committee "to prepare and digest the form of a confederation to be entered into between these colonies." On July 12 this committee reported articles which were drawn up by John Dickinson; but they were not finally adopted until five years after. The limits of this note do not permit an account of the difficulties of sectional interests, commerce, political power, and public lands, and of prejudices, which delayed the establishment of a government even as powerless as that of the Confederation proved to be. It was not until March, 1781,— five years after it was contemplated, — that the Confederation went into effect by the assent of the Maryland delegates when authorized by the people of that State. As a system of government nothing could have been framed more weak or unsatisfactory. It finally became so inefficient that there was danger lest the States should separate into two or three confederacies, or even set up as independent governments. Happily, however, six years after the adoption of the Articles of Confederation, the Convention which formed the present Constitution, met at Philadelphia and gave the people a government which has since continued to afford them satisfaction. Of the signatures appended to this document, those of Adams of Virginia, Penn and Williams of North Carolina, Hutson of South Carolina, and Walton of Georgia, are fac-similes, and with the exception of Hutson, are from the original rolls at Washington.

Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union between the States.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME, WE THE UNDERSIGNED DELEGATES OF THE STATES AFFIXED TO OUR NAMES, SEND GREETING. — Whereas the delegates of the United States of America in Congress assembled did on the 15th day of November in the Year of our Lord 1777, and in the Second Year of the Independence of America agree to certain articles of Confederation and perpetual Union between the States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-bay, Rhode-island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, in the words following, viz. : — "Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union between the States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia."

ARTICLE I. — The Stile of this confederacy shall be, "The United States of America."

* * * * *

ARTICLE XIII. — Every state shall abide by the determinations of the united states in congress assembled, on all questions which by this confederation is submitted to them. And the Articles of this confederation shall be inviolably observed by every state, and the union shall be perpetual; nor shall any alteration at any time hereafter be made in any of them; unless such alteration be agreed to in a congress of the united states, and be afterwards confirmed by the legislatures of every state.

AND WHEREAS it hath pleased the Great Governor of the World to incline the hearts of the legislatures we respectively represent in congress, to approve of, and to authorize us to ratify the said articles of confederation and perpetual union, Know Ye that we, the undersigned delegates, by virtue of the power and authority to us given for that purpose, do by these presents, in the name and in behalf of our respective constituents, fully and entirely ratify and confirm each and every of the said articles of confederation and perpetual union, and all and singular the matters and things therein contained: And we do further solemnly plight and engage the faith of our respective constituents, that they shall abide by the determinations of the united states in congress assembled, on all questions, which by the said confederation are submitted to them. And that the articles thereof shall be inviolably observed by the states we respectively represent, and that the union shall be perpetual. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands in Congress. Done at Philadelphia in the state of Pennsylvania the 9th day of July in the year of our Lord, 1778, and in the 3d year of the Independence of America.

DOCUMENT D.

The Convention which framed the Constitution of the United States met at Philadelphia on May 14, 1787, and very early developed diversities of opinions among its members so irreconcilable that more than once its dissolution seemed to be inevitable; and when its work was done, the Constitution was signed by only thirty-nine of the fifty-five members who at any time attended the Convention.

Besides the reasons for this diversity of opinions and sectional interests mentioned in the note to the Articles of Confederation, were the facts that the call of the Convention limited its power to a revision of those Articles and did not extend to the formation of a new constitution. Moreover, the Confederacy, by the terms of its formation purported to be a "Perpetual Union." A similar divergence of opinions appeared among the States on the question of its adoption. This was for a long time in doubt, and was finally carried in several of the largest states by slender majorities. North Carolina and Rhode Island at first refused adoption, but finally came into the Union, the former, on November 21, 1789, and the latter, May 29, 1790. It is doubtful whether a majority of the people of all the States was in favor of ratifying the work of the Convention; and it is certain that some of the earliest and ablest leaders of the Revolution, such as Samuel Adams, George Clinton, and Patrick Henry, strenuously opposed its adoption. But it was the best result attainable at the time by the ablest and most patriotic men who had ever assembled in America.

Constitution of the United States of America.

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquillity, provide for the common Defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this CONSTITUTION for the United States of America.

Massachusetts in the Congress of 1765. [At New York.] [On Reverse.]

tion of Rights and Grievances of the Colonies; an address to the king; a memorial to the House of Lords, and a petition to the House of Commons. "For a clear, accurate, and calm statement," says Judge Chamberlain in the Narrative and Critical History of America, "these papers were never surpassed; nor, until the appearance of the Declaration of Independence, was any advance made from the ground taken in them." Among other men composing the Congress, who became celebrated during the Revolution, were Johnson and Dyer of Connecticut, the Livingstons of New York, McKean and Rodney of Delaware, Tilghman of Maryland, Dickinson of Pennsylvania, Rutledge, Gadsden and Lynch of South Carolina. Timothy Ruggles, better known as Brigadier Ruggles, although the president of the Congress, did not concur in its action, and finally became a pronounced Loyalist. The Congresses of 1774 and 1775, and the Constitutional Convention of 1787, at Philadelphia, are seen on the four great Documents above the Tablets.

Autographs: S. Welles; John Chandler; Thomas Hutchinson; Oliver Partridge; John Worthington; James Otis; Timothy Ruggles.

APPENDIX.

The correspondence between Judge Chamberlain and the Board of Trustees, accompanying the transfer, was as follows:

Chelsea, February 14, 1893.

To the Trustees of the Boston Public Library:

Gentlemen: I propose to leave to the Boston Public Library, by testamentary bequest, my collection of historical documents, manuscripts, autographs, portraits, and engravings connected therewith, together with a few printed volumes, and some matters of personal interest to me, provided the Trustees, after a more mature consideration of the subject, are still willing to accept the same agreeably to an informal understanding expressed at their meeting, January 17, 1893. That is to say, that the Trustees will furnish the room in the new building, connected with the librarian's room, substantially in accord with the plan prepared by Alex. S. Jenney, and set said room apart as the permanent home of said collection, to be and forever remain in the sole custody of the librarian, under the Trustees.

From the above conditions are to be excepted the framed Address to the King, the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation, and the Constitution of the United States, which would be properly exhibited on the walls of some more public room.¹

While I desire to retain the property of the collection during my life, it is my wish, nevertheless, to transfer to the Library at once such portions of it as are in completed form, and the remainder as soon as it can be completed.

¹With Judge Chamberlain's consent the Tablets described above have been removed to the room for Younger Readers, and are displayed below the four great Documents on the south wall.

The collection will need an index and binding; and as I am familiar with the requirements, I think it would be well to have one or more volumes of each division bound as soon as may be, to serve as examples for the remaining volumes.

It is my purpose to make the collection as complete as I may; and to that end, after any portion of it is transferred to the Library, I shall desire free access to it at suitable times.

(Signed) Respectfully,
Mellen Chamberlain.

Public Library of the City of Boston.
To the Hon. Mellen Chamberlain:

Dear Sir: It is my pleasant duty to inform you that I am instructed by the Trustees of the Public Library of the City of Boston, that they accept with great gratitude your proposed testamentary gift of your unique and valuable "collection of historical documents, autographs, portraits, and engravings connected therewith, together with certain printed volumes," and that they agree to perform all the conditions set forth in your letter of February 14, 1893, to which the gift is made subject.

Permit me to improve the opportunity to express my own appreciation of the great value of your proposed donation, and assure you that all the conditions referred to will be faithfully performed. The Trustees have already commenced the work of preparing a suitable room in the new Library building for the accommodation of the collection as you are pleased to allow them present possession of the same.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Frederick O. Prince,
March 28, 1893. President pro tem.
